Because Hotel Berlin, Berlin cares.

Berlin is the epitome of urban life, a place of constant change, visionary ideas and a cosmopolitan way of life. Berlin is also a place where despite or perhaps because of its metropolitan environment, locals are passionately committed to its environmental protection and to making their city that much better to live in.

We, at Hotel Berlin, Berlin, see ourselves as part of the Berlin identity and we want our guests to directly experience the unique atmosphere of the capital during their visit. Through all our business activities, we want to ensure their stay with us is as environmentally friendly and sustainable as possible.

Not so far away from us at the German parliament and Berlin city hall, many new legal regulations are being drawn up. We see it as our unwavering obligation to comply with these regulations, those passed here and elsewhere.

Berlin is lovable and livable. To ensure that it stays that way in the future, we are committed to reducing any environmental stresses created within our hotel and to protecting the environment as much as possible. To achieve this, we review and refine our environmental management and performance practices on a regular basis.

Like many Berliners and many of our globetrotting guests, we are committed to tackling the global challenge of climate change. And in order to reduce our carbon footprint, we continuously adapt our daily activities by, among other things, producing our own green electricity on the hotel roof.

As a large company, we see it as a matter of course to leverage the opportunities this brings and to help reduce the social differences that exist in the city. Through promoting and participating in cooperative Berlin social projects we can make a positive difference, both today and in the future.

One of our key goals is to inspire our guests, employees, business partners and suppliers to become a living part of our energy and environmental commitment and to carry our vision with enthusiasm and commitment beyond the boundaries of our company.
